Master program

Co-Chiefs:

Prof. Dr. E.- M.Pfeiffer, Prof. Dr. G. Cherkashev

POMOR was established in 2001. The program starts every two years.

It is a double degree research-oriented interdisciplinary master program at Saint Petersburg University and Hamburg University in close cooperation with:

the universities of Bremen, Kiel and Potsdam, Hamburg University of Technology, GEOMAR Helmholtz Centre for Ocean Research Kiel, Alfred Wegener Institute Helmholtz Centre for Polar and Marine Research, Arctic and Antarctic Research Institute, Leibniz Institute for Baltic Sea Research Warnemuende, and All-Russian Scientific and Research Institute of Geology and Mineral Resources of the World Ocean named after Academician I.S. Gramberg.

two years.

- 1st and 2nd semesters - at the Institute of Earth Sciences, at the Otto Schmidt Laboratory for Polar and Marine Research at the Arctic and Antarctic Research Institute and at other Russian partner institutions.
- After the 2nd semester - field practice participating in current research projects, in international expeditions to the Arctic or being trained at the partner research institutions.
- 3rd semester - at one of the partner universities in Germany: in Hamburg, Bremen, Kiel or Potsdam.
- During the 4th semester students are working on their master thesis.

Master program Polar and Marine Sciences

- German and Russian lecturers hold the courses and supervise the master theses together. After the master thesis defence the students are awarded a Master of Science of Hamburg University and St. Petersburg State University.
- POMOR offers a scientifically based and practical oriented education for a career in science, especially in research institutes, public authorities, engineering and consulting companies and in private sector.

Master program Polar and Marine Sciences

- The master program was internationally accredited at Hamburg University by ASIIN e.V. until September 30, 2025.

Being accredited by an international accreditation agency means:

- To receive an international recognition of quality
- To promote "best practices" in education
- To be based on "learning outcomes," rather than "teaching inputs"
- To involve teaching staff in self-assessment and continuous quality improvement

The program at St. Petersburg University

All study program consist of modules.

Autumn Semester
